Perform Repeat Record

Bringing together contributors from dance, theater, visual studies, and art history, Perform, Repeat, Record addresses the conundrum of how live art is positioned within history. Set apart from other art forms in that it may never be performed in precisely the same way twice, ephemeral artwork exists both at the time of its staging and long after in the memories of its spectators and their testimonies, as well as in material objects, visual media, and text, all of which offer new critical ...

Perform, Repeat, Record features two separate introductions by coeditors representing the fields and approaches that have traditionally documented live art: art history (Amelia Jones) and theatre and performance studies (Adrian Heathfield). They have surrounded themselves with a “multitude of voices” (11), a combination of “artists, theorists and historians” reflecting the inherent interdisciplinarity of the art form.
